Supervisors OK Change In Health District For Appomattox County

Appomattox has a new health director, Dr. Robert Earl Parmenter, of Cumberland (fourth from left). After the first of the new year, pending approval from other participating counties, Appomattox will be in a district shared by Campbell, Amherst, Bedford counties and the City of Lynchburg under the direction of Dr. J. B. Kinlaw (third from left)

Richmond - Two new highway bypasses on Arterial Routes 360 and 460, totaling nearly 12 miles, will be open to traffic this week, bring the completed arterial dividing to 787 miles, out of the 1,738 miles designated arterial highways by the 1964 General Assembly.

The first opening was on Wednesday when the US 360-460 Burkeville bypass of three miles is cleared of barriers. The second will be today (Thursday) when nearly nine miles between Farmville and Appomattox, by passing Pamplin City, are turned over to traffic.

Roadside construction on both projects will be going on into October and some speed restrictions will be in effect where forces are still working on roadsides.

The Pamplin City bypass adds another nearly nine miles of divided highway to the Roanoke - to - Richmond route through Farmville, cuts about a mile from the total mileage, and reduces the two-lane mileage that is not now completed or under construction to less than 30 miles on the 165 - mile route.

The cost of the Pamplin City bypass, including right of way and utilities, is $2,471,000.

The parallel lanes on the east end have been carrying traffic for some weeks, but the middle new lanes and western parallel lanes will be opening for the first time this week. The eastern parallel lanes were given final inspection for acceptance from the contractor on Monday.

The contractor, W. W. Warsing, of Crewe, made rapid progress in building the new road on which he started work on September 4 last year, with a completion time limit of Oct. 1.

Applaud Help Given To Flood Victims

In a Friday morning session crowded with a number of items for consideration, Appomattox supervisors met the physician who will head the Appomattox County Health Dept. for a short time, and they talked with his probable successor, result of a proposed change in health districts.

They also commended Appomattox citizens for their generosity in furnishing food, clothing, money and personal aid to the hundreds affected by flash floods in neighboring counties. In addition, they suggested that anyone desiring to give money for flood relief who has not given through a favorite organization, give directly to the Nelson County Relief Fund. Board chairman Otho W. Martin says that the money (mailed or given to Appomattox County treasurer Garland Plunkett) will be sent directly to the treasurer of Nelson County and that in this way the money will be used directly for relief with no administrative costs.

John Cole, as Appomattox Civil Defense director, speaking of his tour of the area said "I have never seen such complete desolation."

Discussing changes in the county health department were Dr. John D. Hamner, who as regional health director, has been supervising the Appomattox County Health Department plus those of Prince Edward, Buckingham and Cumberland, Dr. Robert Earl Parmeater, Rt. 2, Cumberland, will be taking over this post this month. Dr. R. W. Mosely, deputy director, Division of Local Health Services, Va. Dept. of Health asked the supervisors for their approval of a proposal to realign Appomattox into a new health district -- grouping this county with Campbell, Amherst, Bedford counties and the City of Lynchburg to conform to the same Lynchburg metropolitan area as designated for the planning district there.

For a short time, at least, Appomattox will have "two county health doctors", Dr. Mosely explained as Dr. J. B. Kinlaw, present director of the Campbell county grouping of counties, confers with Dr. Parmenter during an orientation period.

Dr. Hamner said that he is hopeful that in "the not too distant future" Appomattox will have larger and more adequate facilities for the clinics and health services offered here He mentioned the Materna Clinics held each second and fourth Tuesday and Well Baby clinics, each Tuesday plus Monfal After-Care consultations and special clinics held at other times.

The Board Clerk, Mrs. Gordon, reminded the supervisors that the county electoral board has authorized registrars to purge the books, a legal requirement every six years.

Larry Young has been named registrar for Court House precinct, succeeding R. E. Haley.

The supervisors also adopted a revised charger of the Central Virginia Regional Planning Commission. The revision concerns requirements for floater members.

Supervisors approved a resolution supporting a proposal to build a bridge over the James River connecting Route 130 on the north and State Route 460 on south in the vicinity of Giles Store to ease traffic congestion at the intersection of Route 460 and Babcock and Wilcox road.

E. L. McCraw, assistant resident engineer, speaking with the board of supervisors explained that C. M. Clarke, the resident engineer was in Nelson County, "on loan" until highway conditions in the flood-affected areas improve. McCraw said that about 50% of the Appomattox-Campbell personnel and almost all equipment

Council Told "Pied Piper" On The Way

Back taxes, traffic lights, additional construction in town and two kinds of rats -- all these topics and more occupied Appomattox Town Council Monday evening.

Council approved a motion by Ivey Holland that mayor H. B. Pack and town manager C. S. Booth take appropriate action, together with the town attorney Harry Gordon Lawson, to collect all back taxes owed the town.

Burke Guill made the motion, unanimously approved, that Appomattox make a request of the Va. Dept. of Highways for permission to install a traffic light at the intersection of W. Confederate Blvd. (Rt. 460) and Court Street.

Rat control has been requested by Council, with town manager Booth reporting that the State Health Dept. will cooperate in extermination measures. He gave a price of $800-$300 per year for control procedures including poison placed with the sewer system. Commented one councilman, "The Pied Piper is on the way." Mayor Pack said that ridding the town of rates is partly a "publicity job", getting private citizens to put out rat poison and the town cleaning up "town rats."

Mayor Pack reported the controlled burning of town-county sanitary fill and plans for the Future Farmers organization to plant pines as a demonstration project in forestry. Income from the pines will return to the town treasury.

The town also approved expenditures of $132 to be given to the Cent. Va. Planning Commission as a share of Appomattox' participation in the regional group. The county has already paid $1140 as a county share.

Town manager Booth said that permits had been approved for construction of a home by M. J. House, Jr., remodeling at the homes of Donald Chernault, Mrs. W. F. Burge, Jr. and Martin Webb.

Flood Relief Fund Still Growing

The Appomattox County Jaycees and the Appomattox County Rescue Squad have been accepting donations for the past two weeks for the flood victims in the James River Basin area. The fund now has approximately $650. With additional help we hope to have the fund surpass $1000. Here are some startling facts which demonstrate the urgent need for money:

3255 families suffering loss of property; 385 homes destroyed; 404 homes with major structural damage; 1,292 homes with minor damage; 86 trailers destroyed; 50 trailers damaged; 113 persons ill or injured; 27 persons hospitalized; 106 known dead; 62 known missing.

Many people in the flood ranged area have no one to turn to except service organizations such as us. We have done a lot but more must be done. The entire economy of the area has been shattered. Hundreds have lost not only their homes and all their possessions, but their business and jobs as well.

Won't you help us help others.
